13th Slavic Linguistics Society Annual Meeting
September 28-30, 2018
University of Oregon, Eugene, Oregon, USA

Plenary Speakers:

Brian Joseph, The Ohio State University
Johanna Nichols, University of California at Berkeley

Call for Papers

The Slavic Linguistics Society invites individual abstract submissions and panel proposals on any Slavic linguistics topic and in any linguistic framework. Current SLS membership is a precondition for presenting at the annual meeting. Participants will be able to join SLS or renew their membership when registering for the conference online starting in June 2018.

Abstract Submission Instructions

Deadline: March 31, 2018

Abstracts should be written in either English or Russian, and should be limited to 3,000 characters. (Accepted papers may be presented in other Slavic languages at the conference if a written summary of the paper is provided to the audience in either English or Russian.) Abstracts should be sent by e-mail to vakarel@uoregon.edu. The abstract itself must not contain the name(s) or affiliation(s) of the author(s) or any other information that identifies the author(s). The text of the cover e-mail should include the paper title, author name(s), affiliation(s), status (faculty, graduate student, etc.) and contact information. Submissions are limited to one single-authored and one jointly-authored abstract per applicant. A small number of competitive travel scholarships will be awarded for graduate students whose abstracts are accepted. Students who are interested in being considered for a travel scholarship should indicate so in the cover e-mail.

Thematic panel proposals should include the panel title and names of the proposed participants. These should be sent to vakarel@uoregon.edu by March 31, 2018.

Notification of acceptance for papers and panels: by June 1, 2018.
